The Oregon Clinic Welcomes New Physician to The Neurology West Division

Portland, Ore., April 21, 2010 – The Oregon Clinic's Neurology West division welcomes Andrew Rose-Innes, MBChB (South African MD equivalent). Dr. Rose-Innes is board-certified in neurology by the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology and is fellowship-trained and board certified in Electrodiagnostic Studies (EMG/Nerve Conduction). His specialty is general neurology with a focus on neuromuscular and neuropsychiatric disorders. He has spent the last five years as an Assistant Professor of Neurology at the University of Washington School of Medicine, Harborview Medical Center in Seattle as a clinician-educator teaching medical students and neurology residents in addition to managing patients in the hospital and out-patient clinic.

Dr. Rose-Innes received his medical degree from the University of Cape Town Medical School in Cape Town, South Africa in 1986, and has been in the United States since 1997. He completed a neurology residency at Yale University school of Medicine and a fellowship in electrodiagnostic/neuromuscular neurology at the University of California, San Francisco. He is the author of research papers, review articles and several book chapters.

"I believe that a modern neurological practice must combine evidence-based medicine with a holistic approach to each patient as an individual. I also recognize that the complexity of neurological disease requires particularly careful explanation and open discussion between the physician, the patient and their family," Dr. Rose-Innes said.
